It's tough

"You can tell they really

IPI/Skyscraper introduces our One Step construction loan.

Great rates. Zero points. Single closing.

At IPI Skyscraper, we understand just how difficult it can be to buy land and to build your dream house. Typically, you'd start with a short-term land loan, then go to a construction loan and finally an "end loan" or conventional mortgage. And typically, you'd pay points or fees every step of the way. Not to mention the aggravation of separate closings.

Not anymore. IPI is proud to announce our One Step construction loan. It's the only zero-point, single-closing land/construction/end loan available that is underwritten entirely on site in our Main Street, Bridgehampton office. This comprehensive program offers you a single interest rate for all three phases of your project, from beginning to end. And most important, IPI locks in your interest rate—in advance, at no additional cost—for 12 months, not for 60 days like other brokers or banks.

We can offer innovative programs like our One Step construction loan because we've consolidated our loan officers, processors, underwriters and closers under one roof. Our experienced mortgage professionals represent more than 100 preferred lenders, so we can find the best possible program at the best possible price for you. And because IPI is the largest mortgage broker in the Northeast, you get the best of two worlds: New York big and Hamptons local.

At IPI Skyscraper, we hammer out all the details of our One Step construction loans up front -- so you don't get hammered by unnecessary fees.

Wamsutta Sheet Sale

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

The Invasion That Never Was

Historical Documents Found In East Hampton Show Washington Tried To Invade The East End

By Dan Rattiner

It's long been known that in 1776 residents of the East End were not particularly enthusiastic about the America Revolution. They were a fairly isolated group of people out here back then, having come across Long Island from New England to settle what are now known as the Hamptons. And since they were a three day ride from New York City and that rebellious General George Washington, they must have felt pretty alone and defenseless if they made too many waves against the British.

But if the East Enders finally did help the British when they arrived in these parts, until now it has always been thought that the East Enders were rather reluctant loyalists to the King. Now all that has changed.

A local historian has found some letters in the East Hampton Library written by George Washington that describe a planned amphibious landing at Southold to divide the British defenses. A month later this landing had to be cancelled because of the behavior of the East Enders.

The discovery of the George Washington letters occurred last November when Greenport resident Merlon Wiggin came to East Hampton Library to do research for some columns he was writing about the Revolutionary War.

The East Hampton Library is blessed with probably the most formidable collection of Long Island history books and notes on all of Long Island. For much of the early part of the 20th century the library was the depository of the aquisitive activities of an East Hampton resident named Morton Pennypacker. He assembled nearly ten thousand documents about Long Island and as he collected them he gave them, for safekeeping, to the East Hampton Library. The collection is now known as the Long Island Collection and the major reading room in the back of the library where you can browse through this collection is known as the Morton Pennypacker Room.

Retreat

Among the documents that Pennypacker collected were a set of eight thick books called The American Archives. Fifty years after the Revolution, the United States Congress gathered together hundreds of thousands of dispatches written during the war by some of its participants. As they were just loose in boxes, Congress decided to pay someone to organize them in printed books.

The job was a huge one and never completed. Whoever did it began typesetting the material from 1760 and got as far as December 17, 1776. Then, the work stops, right in the middle. There is an index, and it goes up 1778, but there is no corresponding volume or pages with the material on it.

Nevertheless, these eight volumes, tens of thousands of pages in little tiny print, were typeset and a limited number of sets printed up. According to Dorothy King, who runs the Pennypacker Room, one of them is here in East Hampton, and it's the only set on Long Island.

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

W did write quite a piece on Larry Rivers, our resident artist-rougue. He' not only paints extremely well, but a real treat is listening to him wail away on his saxophone with his jazzy music group. Look for him at different events this summer.

When a company goes public, those involved in the purchase of the first offering have to agree not to sell their shares for the first 180 days. For the great Martha Stewart empire, that 180 days was up on Friday, which was the day the stock market dropped 500 points, the biggest drop it its history. As for Martha who owns two homes in East Hampton, her stake in the company is now valued at $407 million, which means that for six months there she was worth over a billion. Well, not any more. But who knows about next week?

The New York Post recently quoted A.J. Benza who has a house out in the Hamptons; he also has a show on the E! Channel, "New York is my wife, LA is my mistress. I feel like I'm cheating on New York when I'm here in L.A. I feel like I have a little girlfriend on the side and she's a little stripper in LA with blonde hair and big boobs."

Hamptonite and Pulitzer Prize winner Carl Bernstein has been named the new executive editor of voter.com, an Internet site that covers politics.

Film rights for the late James Kirkwood Broadway show, PS Your Cat Is Dead have been bought by Steve Guttenberg. Kirkwood was a well-known resident of Northwest in East Hampton.

Former Mayor Ed Koch, one of the two film critics for Dan's Papers, is in the process of writing a children's book entitled Eddie Likes To Talk. He's co-writing it with Pat Thaler, his younger sister. It's his thirteenth book.

What appears to be Patrick Molloy III's new 195 foot boat, is now tied up in a slip, actually it's sticking way out of a slip adjacent to Long Wharf in Sag Harbor. There was considerable controversy about his bringing his yacht here even though he owns the slips and the docks. This boat bears the name Intuition. Pat Malloy's boat's called Intuition. There's a story here.

Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism's Third Annual Alfred Eisenstadt Award was presented to Richard Avedon a week ago Wednesday. Avedon has a house in Montauk.

A year ago, the towns of Eastern Long Island put into place a two- percent real estate transfer tax on all sales over a quarter of a million dollars.

Dan's Papers "They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival

(featuring films that either takes place in the Hamptons or were filmed here)

April 15th ~ David And Lisa
The gentle exploration of a mentally disturbed young couple, groping for places in the world~ remains one of the best films on the subject. Performances by the lead couple are marvelous.
Short: 1994 Artists Writers Game

April 22nd ~ Last Summer
Exceptionally strong story of the trials of teenagers playing out explosive games of sexual awakening and status on local beaches. Provocative and jarring, its original X rating has been edited for an R.
Short: Out of the Attic

April 29th ~ Masquerade
A taunting romantic suspense thriller of an ambiguous young man's ambitions and the wealthy wife he might have married for her dowry. Beautiful people and likewise beautiful, close-by locations, highlight the dark plot.
Short: Nice

May 6th ~ Amistad
Based on a true story, the movie chronicles the incredible journey of a group of enslaved Africans who are trying to get back to their beloved homeland. They take over the Amistad which gets seized by US authorities off Montauk and brought to Connecticut where they are charged with murder & imprisoned to await their fate. A very emotional movie and well acted.
Short: Shoto-Kan Karate-do

May 13th ~ The Dain Curse
Fittingly adapted from an early Dashielle Hammett novel, this well produced, film version is crammed full with the smoking-gun intrigue of The Maltese Falcon author.
Short: 1994 Artists Writers Game (Encore)

May 20th ~ Grey Gardens
This somewhat shocking documentary actually remains compellingly poetic and touching. It captures a small portion of the later years of Edith Bouvier Beale and her daughter, Edie (aunt and cousin of Jacqueline Onasis), filmed in their decaying, over grown mansion in East Hampton. Once seen, Edith and Edie, will not soon leave you.

Invasion

Merlon Wiggin had been looking through these volumes for several days before he made the discovery. The date was August 30, 1776 and the entry, dutifully typed up for The American Archives, was an order handwritten by General George Washington asking Connecticut Governor Jonathan Trumble to organize a force of 5,000 men to cross Long Island Sound and land on a beach in Southold. It was suggested Governor Trumble, a major advocate of the rebellion, create this force from several Connecticut militias and request other militias from Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

George Washington's letter that August had the force of the Continental Congress behind it since he had been appointed Commander in Chief of the Continental armies. On the other hand, Washington had already been knocked back on his heels in his first encounter with the British just four days before he had written this letter. He had lost the Battle of Long Island in Brooklyn and had to be evacuated at night by boat across the East River into Manhattan. He was writing to the Governor of Connecticut from his encampment at Haarlem (as it was spelled then) Heights.

Merlon Wiggin, who is the village historian for the Village of Greenport was startled when he read this letter. It was the first time he had ever heard of a planned invasion of eastern Long Island, and he continued to read the correspondence that went back and forth the next two days between Governor Trumble and General Washington.

Trumble wrote back that he had a commitment from Rhode Island to send a battalion of troops and another from Massachusetts to send more troops. He identified eight regiments and 300 whaleboats that would be sailed across the landing. He also wrote that he had already for arranged enough provisions for the troops as well as ammunition and weaponry and that he had arranged for the troops' pay.

Washington, meanwhile, had issued an order to General George Clinton to put an expedition together to go from Manhattan to the East End and find rebel sympathizers who could help in securing provision and livestock for the soon to arrive troops. These supplies would have to be kept out of the hands of the British if at all possible.

General Clinton gave the assignment to Colonel Henry Livingston. During the next week, things moved rapidly. On September 2, Trumble ordered Colonel Erastus Wolcott to prepare six field artillery pieces for the boats to take across Long Island Sound. Walcott was also to report when Long Island Sound was free of British vessels so they would have their best chance of making the crossing and he was directed to "cooperate with the forces on the Island and form an army to command them in such a matter as to secure and defend the inhabitants, assist or dispose of the stock in such a manner as shall be agreed upon and to annoy the enemy."

The selected landing ground on Long Island was Oyster Ponds in Southold Township town between Greenport and Orient Point. That George Washington, having been so recently bloodied by the British in Brooklyn, would plan such an expedition might seem strange, but the British who had beaten him were encamped in Brooklyn and the British troops were counting on getting their supplies from central and eastern Long Island to sustain them.

Washington apparently did not expect his East End landing to drive the British off the Island. It was intended merely to distract them by opening a second front and depriving them of much needed sustenance. During the interim he hoped to regroup and go on the offensive from Manhattan.

Whether this plan would had succeeded or not would never be known. As Wiggin read further in The American Archives he began to see the plan unravel. There was a letter from the British General William Howell in Brooklyn to the King dated September 2.

"An attack is certainly intended against.... the East End; the place is thought to be the least defensible."

The next day General Howe issued a decree demanding that local residents of the East End sign a pledge of allegiance to the King. If they did so they would be paid for any livestock and food taken. If they did not, their livestock and food would be taken anyway, without pay.

The East Enders began lining up in droves to pledge their allegiance.

Meanwhile, Colonel Henry Livingston, having arrived on the East End, organized a 150 man Southold militia and set out heading west in order

Help Me

It's An Addiction. I Buy A Stock. The Country Crashes. I Can't Help It. I'm Sorry

By Dan Rattiner

I'd like to apologize to everyone for what's happened to the stock market. It's all my fault. I bought a stock, the whole thing collapsed. I promise I won't do it again.

I know I've said this before. It's like an addiction. I stay out of the market for a few years and then somebody says something and I just can't help myself. Then, either the stock I've bought goes through the floor or the entire market collapses. It's never failed; I'm the kiss of death.

The stock I bought this time was something called Vocaltec. I bought it in February after overhearing people talk about it in breathless terms at the Bridgehampton Candy Kitchen. You have to understand I know that I have this addiction and I know exactly what's gonna happen if I take a tip. So here it was February and I had been good and I had no stocks whatsoever and hadn't had any for almost a year since the Raytheon Debacle, which I'll tell you about later and these people were saying that Vocaltec had just jumped from seventeen to twenty-seven in a week, and seemed like it was headed toward the sky and there was no stopping it. It's gonna be like Clearnet, one of the people said. A friend of mine made $40,000 on Clearet in one week, they said.

> I don't even remember what I did that caused the stock market crash in '87, but I do remember it was one stock, one lousy stock.

I clapped my hands over my ears but it was too late. Later in the day I called a broker and already Vocaltec was at twenty-nine and I was panting like a hound. It went up to forty and then it collapsed back down to twelve along with everything else and I am so, so sorry.

I have to say that whenever I get one of these tips, I always place exactly the same amount of money on the stock's nose, which is $5,000. My $5,000 with Vocaltec was worth about $1,300 when I sold it, which is about par for the course for me. Unfortunately the NASDAQ market has gone from five trillion to three trillion in the last week and that's awful.

I mentioned the Raytheon Debacle a year ago, which was the last time I owned a stock. On television I was watching one of these financial reports. The war in Serbian had just ended and once again we had used up all our Patriot Missiles against the Scuds and this analyst was saying that it was just like after the Gulf war and that now we were out of them again and we'd have to get Raytheon to build new ones to replace the ones that got used up and it was a perfect time to buy that stock. Raytheon had gone through the roof after the Gulf War.

So the next day, I put my $5,000 down on Raytheon, which was trading at forty-two. Raytheon went up eight points, there was a report that they were going to get into a merger which sent it up even higher and then suddenly the entire stock went kaflooie to nineteen at which point I sold it. There was an article about it on the front page of The New York Times. The president had resigned. It was a startling and totally unexpected development.

I felt especially bad because I hadn't owned a

Help

stock for five years before I bought Raytheon and you would have thought I'd have learned after the Apple Debacle. But at least it didn't cause a full stock market crash.

I don't even remember what I did that caused the stock market crash in '87, but I do remember it was one stock, one lousy stock which I sold after only 30 days, which was four days after everything went to hell.

You'd think that because this has been going on for almost twenty years, I would know to stay out of the stock market. And for the most part, I do. I stay out of the market for one year, or three years or five years even, and believe me there is temptation all over the place but then there'll be something irresitable, a rich uncle telling me something or an overheard conversation on line at the supermarket and I think it's been all these years and everybody keeps making all this money. I'll do this just this once, how could it hurt? So I'll buy this stock and it will even go up a few more points and then I'll get this feeling of hubris, there's no other word for it, that I know everything and I have figured it all out.

For instance, back in February when I bought Vocaltec, I told people it was a sure thing, that we were in the midst of a revolution, that new technology was replacing the old. And when Alan Greenspan got up and said he thought the new NASDAQ technology market was going up for no good reason, and that the old technology which was not going up so much was really being overlooked, after which he raised interest rates a quarter point to rein in the new technology, I told friends that he was a fool. It's like it's a hundred years ago, I said, and the light bulb has come in and the stock is going up and Greenspan stands up and says we really have to pay attention to gas lamps, which are going down, he doesn't know what he's talking about.

I told these people about Raytheon and the War in Serbia and what had happened after the Gulf War. Hubris is what it is. It's an exhilarating feeling and I'm addicted to it. God help me.

After I caused the stock market crash in '87, I actually stayed out of the market for eight years, as I said, which was the longest stretch I've gone. But then one day, I was sitting in the waiting room of a dentist's office flipping through a Money magazine and I read an article that named the ten hottest stocks of 1995. All of them were on their way up, the article said. Nine of them I never heard of. The tenth was Apple. A completely innovative company the article said. A sure winner. It was trading at sixty-three dollars and I bought $5,000 worth of it. Two days later they released the figures on their new hand held computer, The Newton, which said basically that nobody was buying it, and the stock collapsed down to twenty. The president of the company John Scully resigned. And I sold my Apple.

They need to have a Betty Ford Clinic for stockaholics. I'll be their first customer. ●

Forever. Almost

New Discoveries In Learning What Happens After The End Of Everything

By Dan Rattiner

There's been a flurry of activity recently in the living forever business. In Scotland a veterinarian working in a research lab, cloned a sheep. After that, they cloned chickens, ducks, more sheep and most recently, a monkey. Now, a research lab in Maryland has identified the entire genetic code of a human being, which has involved more than 6 billion separate identifications.

Exactly what this means is that in a very short time, cosmically speaking, doctors should be able to stamp out all disease while other doctors come up with genes that prevent the aging process. In other words, barring getting hit by a truck or some other accident, there will be nothing to prevent us from living forever. We're about to discover the fountain of youth.

Let's say we are at nine or ten billion...when they finally discover eternal youth. Where do we put everybody?

These are major strides in the living forever business. I must say that for a long time in my youth, I thought the living forever business was a very big deal. Actually, that's not quite right. What I thought was that not living forever was a very big deal. For me.

This struck me, as I traveled to exotic places, bedded beautiful women, ate at four star Michelin restaurants and laughed at the humor of some of the world's best comedians, as a pretty crummy cosmic joke. I liked being alive a lot and it seemed amazing to me that I could have been born into all of this great fun, and then repeatedly have someone tell me that it wasn't going to last forever, that I would grow old, get hunched over and walk with a cane, die, be put in a box, buried in the ground and then be eaten by worms. And then after that, after a brief time, nobody would have any memory of anything I ever did.

That there was evidence all around me supporting this theory seemed incredible. My family would take me to the family graveyard and we'd talk about my grandfather who is buried there, and whom we knew a bit about, and then we'd talk about my great grandfather and my great, great grandfather and then we'd just shrug. These were people who had died not very long ago at all.

During these years, I read of attempts by philosophers and religious leaders to explain all of this and to tell us that this was the way of the world, and if things didn't die, they wouldn't be making room for things to come, that this was all very natural and in the scheme of things and if you wanted to, you could believe in the after-life, that we could all meet again up in heaven. And so, it was all just fine.

Well, it didn't sound fine to me.

Now here we are and in the last year or two, there have been absolutely terrific developments that could possibly lead to eternal life and perpetual youth. But the more I think about it, the more I'm not so sure it's such a great thing.

For one thing, the population of the planet is almost six billion people, a virtual infestation of humanity. It was just two billion people when I was born. This is an amazing increase. Let's say we're at nine or ten billion people when the final breakthrough finally comes and they finally truly discover living forever and eternal youth. You're still going to have people getting each other pregnant and bringing more people into the world. So, where do we put everybody and who decides who gets to live or die? I mean, it isn't going to be cheap to take this medicine for eternal youth and living forever. The HMO's? Oxford has it as an option, for so much a month, you can take the living forever plan. And Aetna also offers it but there's a deductible. Frankly, I don't know how we would ever work this business of overpopulation out.

But, assuming we do, there have been even more recent studies that show that forever isn't forever. Six billion years from now, for instance, were going to have to leave the earth. According to the scientists, our sun, which is just a typical smallish size star will commence to do what other smallish size stars do, which is to start to consume all of its hydrogen. When that happens, the sun will expand, burn up the closest four planets of the total nine, and then collapse in upon itself to form a black hole. Since Earth is planet number three, during this period we're going to have to show a little creativity.

After that, however, it won't just be the solar system, it will be the whole universe coming to an end. This will happen about 400 billion years from now, and scientists today are divided into two opposing schools of thought. One school is that the central force of gravity is so great, that the bits of the universe flying apart will go slower and slower, eventually stop and then begin to come back together again, sort of like watching the videotape of an explosion backwards. Eventually, they will clump back together in a great white-hot mass and burn themselves up into non-physical energy.

The second school of thought says that the force of gravity is not strong enough to stop the expanding universe and that the various pieces of it will go off into different directions, until all hydrogen in all the stars is consumed and everything just freezes to death.

An article about this in Time magazine recently, described how people at that time might hoard different chunks of suns and moons that might have a little bit of warmth left in them, but even they eventually give out.

OK, I suppose it's true that 400 billion years is 400 billion years, which is a very long time. But in case you haven't noticed, the years of our lives seem to fly by and if you're sitting there on a chunk of moon shivering in the dark and it's 400 billion years from now, you wouldn't have thought it's been so long. Bottom-line? In spite of this flurry of activity, the business of living forever has not advanced even one inch.

It has been, should we say, a false dawn. ●

Yes, it was true, he was losing a friend.

Rotary Lives

Using The Old Rotary Phone Trick To Outwit An Automated Operator System

By Dan Rattiner

How many times a day does the image of a rotary phone appear in your mind?

You may think this is an odd question. Rotary phones haven't been made in twenty years. But every time you make a phone call to a large company and the voice message system comes on, I'll bet the image of a rotary phone shows up. It does for me.

I call the gas company, for instance. “Welcome to the Ajax Gas Company,” a recorded voice says. “If you know your party's extension, press it now. If this call is about service, press one. If this is about billing, press two. If you have a rotary phone, please stay on the line and someone will be with you shortly.”

The trouble is these voice messaging systems are all built differently. You sit there – or I should say I sit there – and try to outsmart it – while puffs of smoke are being emitted by the gas burner on the stove across the room. It's making squeaking noises, like a mouse. The house smells like burnt carrots, for some reason.

I need service, so I press one.

“If you would like to be connected to our automated safety check line, press one,” the voice says. “If you are calling to learn more about an existing service call, press two. If you have a service contract, press three. If you don't have a service contract but know your account number, press four. If you have a service contract but don't know your account number press five. If your house smells like burning carrots, press six.”

...there are hundreds of thousands and millions of people who can't figure out the damn phone answering system...

I don't know about you, but at this point I hang up the phone, attend to the stove burner and I call again. This time, when it says, “Press one to speak to the service department, I put my hands and fingers behind my back. In my mind, I am imagining a rotary phone. I will press nothing. The system will assume I really do I have a rotary phone and then will (if they built their system to account for this) default me to an operator where I can talk to a human being.

I look out the window fervently, hoping I don't see the rotary phone police squad cars roaring up my driveway. There aren't any.

I really do wish this was different. If all of these automated telephone answering machines were built on the same model, then I wouldn't have to lie. I'd have long since figured out what to expect. But the fact is, that these phone answering systems have been put together either in all kinds of ways. There are systems built by geniuses and systems built by nincompoops. So in every case, I put my hands behind my back and imagine myself a rotary phone. Nincompoop machines connect me to a dial tone.

There is a lot of guilt connected with all of this, since I haven't owned or used a rotary phone in all these years and I think a case can be made for ending this supposed catering to rotary phone users. For one thing, there really aren't many of them anymore. Although there are only about eleven rotary phones left in the world, all of them owned and operated by stubborn old coots who simply won't get on with it. The people who run big corporations seem to think there are hundreds of thousands, maybe millions of them still out there. There really aren't. What there are are hundreds of thousands and millions of people who can't figure out the damn phone answering system or are pretending. They are lying and it is stressful. And we don't need any more stress in the world.

This is not to say that rotary phones haven't had their place in the scheme of things. Rotary phones were used prominently in old movies. Cary Grant would dial a "2," and it would go "tic-butta-butta," and then a "9" and it would go "Tic-butta-butta-butta-butta-butta-butta-butta-butta-butta," and by the time he was halfway through dialing the number, the murderer had stabbed the girl in the hotel room and fled down the fire escape.

In some of the more romantic movies, Bette Davis would have changed her mind and decided to call up the man she had just told she would never again see and she would get halfway through dialing the number and then burst into tears, change her mind again and hang up. That sort of thing doesn't happen today. Beep, beep, boop, beep, beep, beep. No time.

Today, however, when life is so much faster, a department of the rotary phone police should be created to do everyone a favor by cracking down on rotary phone users. A deadline should be set: no more rotary phones after July first. Anyone using one after that date should be charged and arrested.

Remember book burnings? There should be rotary phone burnings. Old black and white movies should be banned. Bring in the rotary phone police and the national economy, unhindered by having to cater to people who are supposed to have rotary phones, will surge ahead, sending stocks back through the roof and we'd be rid of all the lies and all the guilt that goes with it. ●

The Private Eye's Story

A Manhattan PI's Tale About His Investigation Into Flight 800

By Jerry Cimisi

Vincent Parco is a private eye. He runs Intercontinental Investigations, Inc. in midtown Manhattan. Four years ago this summer he became involved in his own investigation of TWA Flight 800. It was a labyrinthine trial, tracking down one story which then became another.

Mr. Parco is a stocky man in his late forties. He has the Kojak look on top and a thick mustache. And like the TV detective he's got the manner of someone comfortable with the foibles and deceptions of human beings. He told his story easily.

"That summer I got a call from an old client. He wanted me to meet him on his boat in Freeport. It was about a month after Flight 800 went down.

"So I'm on the boat; there are four guys there. One of them had a relative on the plane. He said he had reason to believe 800 was sabotaged. He went to bingo games in Moriches. He met this woman there; she was in her sixties. Her son was a bouncer in a bar. He told her that some customer had come in lamenting that his uncle who was in the National Guard, or the Navy, had accidentally shot down Flight 800."

This story or something like it was prevalent that summer and afterward: that someone in a military capacity had "accidentally" brought down the JFK-Paris 747 and killed the 230 passengers and crew onboard. When Vincent Parco began to track it down, however, he found something other than what he imagined at the end of it.

"I went to bar in question, in Mastic, kind of a redneck place. A ladyfriend of mine who works for one of the networks came along. Naturally she was interested in the story. And a writer who used to work for me, and now worked for an independent film company, offered me a sum if I could get some proof on this story, and also authorized me to offer anyone $40,000 if they could bring me proof of what really happened to the plane.

"The woman's son, the bouncer, his name was Nick. I meet him. He's got a sheet rock business during the day. It was someone who worked for him that made the remark about the uncle. He wouldn't tell me the guy's name.

"To make a long story short, or at least this part of the long story, we pull out all the phone records of the company, we contact all the employees. At first we get no info. I go back to Nick. Finally Nick tells me he'll tell the guy to get in touch with me.

"Nobody calls. Then Nick gives us the guy's number. I left messages and left messages; he doesn't call back.

"At this point a friend of mine who works for the government told me, 'A good friend of mine is a major in the Air National Guard at Gabreski [Airport in Westhampton]. He was following up some part of the investigation of Flight 800. Something about two guys on a boat, witnesses, who had seen something very important. And then he was told to drop it.'

Vincent Parco, President of Intercontinental Investigations, Inc.

Parco hears more of "the story." The "accident" caused "the Shooter" (as Parco and his colleagues were referring to him by now) so much distress he checked himself into a mental hospital three days after the plane went down.

"We looked into all the mental institutions in the area. We found there was someone admitted to Kings Park on July 20, three days after 800. So then we tried to get the medical records. That's not easy to get but we did."

The patient, let's refer to him as Bill Waters, was suffering from severe depression and a drug dependency, said Parco.

"Now I'm really involved in this story. I've got a lot of cases running at any given time, but I think I'm getting close to something here. So I go to the guy's house, somewhere in Patchogue. A big guy in a postman's uniform comes to the door. It was Waters' father."

Parco didn't say he was investigating Flight 800, but he did say he needed some information about the man's son. "There was no problem with the father. He told me his son had a drug problem. And he told me his son had been a gunner's mate in the Navy. Now I think I'm really getting close. I don't know if you've had any dealings with parents who have a kid with a bad drug problem. After a while, they give up, they don't care. I think he thought I was some kind of insurance guy. Now we had a few addresses for the Waters, one was in Medford. And the father tells me his son was married for a very short time – less than a month– to a girl in Medford."

Parco sends a woman from his company out to Medford. "She's canvassing the neighborhood, asking questions. Oh, yeah, someone tells her, that guy was a drugie, he used to hang out with those Arabs and smoke pot. She goes to the address where Waters used to live. An Arab man opens the door. He's not too pleased to hear Waters' name. 'What do you want to know about him for? That son of a bitch, he was married to my daughter, he was a drug addict.'"

Parco's employee sees a young woman, Arabic, at the house. "She starts to talk to her. Now my girl is Jewish, married to an Israeli. She finds the girl and her family came from Ramallah, which is an Arab enclave in Israel."

"While this is going on, I'm out in Patchogue, it's the end of the summer, I'm in a hotel on 112. I still hadn't talked to this guy that had worked for Nick. I said, let me give this guy another call. A woman answers the phone, she says that's my husband. He wasn't there – but then he calls me back. 'What's this about?' he says. So I just told him straight, I was a private detective, investigating Flight 800 – and that I was also authorized by a film company to give anyone $40,000 who could offer some proof about what happened to the plane.

"But he says, 'No, that's not the story, Nick got it all screwed up. First of all, I don't work for Nick, I work for myself. I didn't call you back because about six months ago I got in a fight in a bar and I hurt the guy pretty bad and I thought you were looking for me to arrest me. I had an uncle in the Guard. His job was to maintain all this equipment. I had a brother who was in the Navy; he committed suicide nine years ago. He was in a submarine, he was paranoid, my family was telling the Navy he had problems, they shouldn't keep him in a submarine. They didn't listen, he killed himself. I don't have any information about 800. If I did, I'd tell you, I could use the money. My uncle's not involved."

Parco was thinking of all the time and work he has put into something that seems a dead end; then he hears his employee's story about Waters and the Arab wife and Ramallah.

"So I said let's track this guy down." Parco finds that one of Waters' addresses was a post office box in Westhampton near the airport. At any rate, Waters is no longer in Kings Park. "I find out he is in this private rehab place in North Carolina. I'm thinking what's going on? This guy doesn't have a pot to piss in, how is this getting paid for?"

At this time Parco talks to a contact he at first referred to as having been in the CIA; then he added, "Let's just say he worked on projects with the military that were reputed to be CIA projects. I told him about this business with Waters and the wife from Ramallah.

"He told me, 'You know Vinny, there are people who are pleased you're going in this direction with the military. Because that's not what it is and no one wants the truth to be found.'

"I said, 'What do you mean?'

"He told me he had it on pretty reliable information – conversations he had with people in the government and the military – that the plane had been shot down by terrorists from a boat. 'It was an f--k you missile,' he said. 'We had bombed some sites in Iraq. They were showing us they could take our planes down right off our shores. The government knows the boat, they know the number of the boat, they know who was on it.'"

Parco was asked why wouldn't the government respond to a terrorist attack? The culprits behind the World Trade Center bombing were tracked down, arrested and convicted. After determining that Osama bin Laden was behind the bombing of American embassies in Africa in 1998, President Clinton ordered a suspected terrorist training camp in Afghanistan bombed, along with a pharmaceutical factory in Sudan that was thought to be manufacturing material for terrorism. (In fact, it seemed the administration acted more to act than on fact. Afterward, it was said that bin Laden's presence in the camp was not established, and the pharmaceutical factory was very likely not producing anything nefarious.)

"In my opinion this is the most corrupt administration ever. You ever see a list of the people who died around Clinton? Well, that's another story. If people thought our planes could be shot out of the sky do you know the panic there would be? Do you realize the money that would be lost? Boeing and TWA are getting sued by the families of the victims – but whatever they lose, they'll make it in government contracts. Look at the recent business Boeing just got from the government. It's a wash."

Last year, as a direct result of President Clinton's visit to China, Boeing was contracted by the Chinese to produce a number of planes for them. This certainly could be considered nothing more than the normal course of business for the giant, venerable corporation, but Parco saw it as otherwise.

"We found out a little more about Waters. He was being sponsored at the rehab by someone who had been in rehab himself. The rehab place told us it was only $35 a day to stay there. Also, we got his papers from the Navy. Officially, he was called a fireman recruit. And he was discharged in 1986."

When Parco was asked if he eventually talked to Waters he said, "No. Was it coincidence or not that here was this story about someone going into a mental hospital right after 800 and that he was connected to the Navy? Maybe Waters was used by someone, maybe as a cover, maybe he's was so strung out on dope by then he couldn't've given review: reading at canio's

By Evette Somekh

Canio's Books in Sag Harbor once again opened its doors to the public giving us an opportunity to enjoy an evening without television. They also didn't charge us. Friday, April 14, the bookstore hosted a reading of three one-act plays. It was standing room only.

The first play, Shirley Kessel's The Recitation, was a delightful little piece. The play was read by Joanna Gustin and Stephen Hamilton. We watched an uncle share his love of literature with his niece. The first rule of good writing is show, don't tell. Our uncle showed. He taught his pupil to understand and project. He told her, "It is not for my sake that I do this. It is for yours." I heartily agreed and was glad I could be a part of it.

The second piece of the evening was a funny little play by Barry Head, The News Hour. This four-character piece was read by Paul Shepherd, Jan Buckaloo, Scott Wilson and Joan Zandell. It was a gathering of neighbors and best friends who had wit and charm. Sound like anyone you know? And as all neighbors that you actually speak to, they had "good news and bad news, and good news and good news." We are all grateful for neighbors we like. We so rarely live that way. So while our neighbors drank their way to truths, we, the audience, felt lucky. We were witnesses not participants. It's great to be entertained, not involved. Especially if it involves good news and bad news truths. And those good news and bad news truths are uncovered by people you have to live next door to.

Finally, what we'd all been waiting for, Edward Padula's Six Characters In Search of a Play (with a bow to Pirandello). You got that, didn't you? Of course you did. It was read beautifully by Barry Head, Edwin Meyer, Beulah Garrick, Bernard Pollack, Sandy Ettleson, Stephen Dym and Elaine Stritch. It was a funny quick piece about friends (not neighbors) discussing great plays, their writers and the creation of those plays, all while feasting on glazed shepherd's pie. I would have been content just watching them eat. However, I was given more than the food. I was given smart dialogue and great timing by a talented writer and his equally talented cast. I was happy I hadn't just settled for the meal. A lively dinner discussion enabled our actors to discover that they had something more than heart burn. They had much more. Ms. Stritch advised them in the final, perfectly executed, line of the evening that "...it is (pregnant pause) (still waiting) (not yet) (get ready) A PLAY." I ask you, who else could do that?

Elaine Stritch

We East End folk are very lucky to live in a place that caters to needs we often don't think we have. We have retail shops willing to open their doors to the public for purposes other than displaying their wares. And we are privileged to have wonderful actors taking their time to entertain us. I would like to end by saying thank you to Suzanne McNear for producing the evening's entertainment and to all the participants already mentioned. Oh, and next time, do you think you could do something about the weather and a chair?

to keep the nearest British troops – they were in Huntington – as far away as possible from the amphibious assault he expected would soon come down from New London, Connecticut. Livingston marched his men all the way down to Riverhead, where they learned that the local residents were signing the pledge to the King in droves, during the night. His men then abandoned the expedition and deserted.

Here's what he wrote to both Washington and Governor Trumble on September 11 "The game is up."

On September 12 he wrote to Livingston: "The only object there is (now is) securing and bringing off the persons and effects of our friends. Perhaps some of the provision for our enemy may be intercepted or destroyed."

Washington wrote Lvingston to see if he couldn't arrange to bring livestock and supplies off Long Island to Connecticut and on September 24 Livingston responded, "I have brought off 3,129 sheep, 400 head of horned cattle from the Shinnecock plains, about thirty miles from Sag Harbor."

The entries in The American Archives end two months later and there is no further reference to the attempt to invade the East End. What did happen in the winter of 1776-77 was that General Howe dislodged General Washington from the Haarlem Heights and chased him across New Jersey, with Washington fighting a series of rear guard actions at Morristown and Princeton before finally crossing the Delaware to suffer the bitter winter at Valley Forge.

Later in 1777, the British took a firmer grip on the East End, establishing army garrisons where they could gather up footstuffs and livestock before shipping if off to their soldiers further inland.

To anyone's knowledge, Merl Wiggin's discovery in the East Hampton Library last fall is a major addition to American history. Nowhere in any history book is there a reference to a planned invasion of the East End by the patriots. Historians say they have never run across these letters before.

Could such an invasion have changed the course of the American Revolution, ending it sooner? Whatever might have been was erased by the actions of the residents of the East End over two hundred years ago, plumping down their bets on the side of the King and making it all but impossible for such an invasion to go ahead.

"What I would really like to see," Merlon Wiggin said, "is for the present Congress to put some money aside to finish those American Archives. Those notes and letters have got to be somewhere, probably in a back room at the Smithsonian. How much could it cost?" • you a straight answer. You got to understand that by this point I'd been so hot on the Navy thing, then that blew away. I was neglecting my business and when I got hit with what my contact told me I thought I could go on with this and maybe find out the truth – but I'd never be able to prove it. So I dropped it."

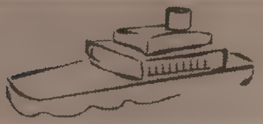
The New York Times recently featured Parco engaged in more mundane pursuits: hired by landlords to track down tenants who are not using their rent controlled apartments as primary residences. There's a photograph of Parco aiming a video camera from a car. And then there are the more high profile cases; he said his company has just been consulted about the Elian Gonzalez case. Though at any rate, Vincent Parco must occasionally wonder about a certain boat off the south shore of eastern Long Island and a former Navy serviceman in rehab. Legends and facts about the tragedy and mystery of TWA Flight 800 have become so interwoven since the summer of 1996 that in many instances it has become near impossible to separate these disparate weaves into whole fabrics. •



The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF A NEW ISLANDER #102

TV

May 4th through 10th is National No TV Week. No TV, No Gameboy, No Nintendo, No PlayStation, No Computer. It's a week for families to be together without electronic interference. To relate, talk, to share quality time.

What sick mind thought this up? I'll bet it was a group of those childhood experts. Have you noticed those experts are usually men pushing their books on talk shows? Those bastards never spent any time in the trenches. They were busy writing their books and advancing their careers, while their wives were at home wrangling children, laundry and dinner.

I don't take advice from anyone who hasn't had to stop breakfast to mop an overflowing toilet and then get on her knees to shove her hand in the toilet, through the muck, to retrieve a Happy Meals toy. Been there, done that.

No electronics for a week? Why? So we get to do all the housework, child care, cooking, go to work, take kids to and from activities, grocery shop, run errands, all under worse circumstances because some pseudo-pundit thinks we will bond better to these kids?

When my first baby was born in California, they had "Bonding Rooms." A lovely room they put the mother, baby and father in just after birth so they could have some time to quietly bond. I refused to go to the bonding room. I wanted my bed and drugs. They nurse was shocked, "It's important for you to bond with your baby these first few hours."

"Look, I've just gone through nineteen hours of as much pain as I knew existed, and you want to put me alone in a room with the two people who caused it??? Bad idea..."

I don't want to spend more time with these people. Neither of them works for a living, has any interesting hobbies or even knows to brush their teeth daily. They're absolute pigs with no manners and the apparent combined IQ of a paper plate.

I hear a lot about how people bonded better in the old days because there was no electronic interference. Baloney! Mothers throughout time have used any and all devices at hand to occupy children. In the old days, before TV, they used chores; women sent the kids out to pluck, plant, pick, milk the cows, paint the fence, build a barn, make cheese, anything, anything to get them out from underfoot! A frontier woman would have planted your fields for a Disney video!

If you want parents to turn off the TV for a week, then give us all the week off WITH pay! You wanna read Sam I Am three consecutive times? You wanna play Candyland for more than an hour without losing your sanity? You wanna go on nature walks and spend the rest of the afternoon looking for deer ticks? You know they cheat at Scrabble, they never flush the toilet, they don't want anything you cooked, they only eat Macaroni & Cheese and pizza. They still think milk coming out of someone's nose is hysterical. They're a bunch of morons I tell ya.

G-d invented TV for a reason. To keep children alive. I can listen to my son go on ad nauseum about dinosaurs or I can put in The Land Before Time video. I can listen to my preteen daughters stream-of-consciousness drivel, commit suicide, or suggest she go talk on the phone to her friends.

Too much time with your children will rot your intelligence. You will become a bearer of very little brain and big words will bother you. As far as I'm concerned, if your kids are alive at the end of the day, you've done your job.

It was expected to bump up town revenues. The money would be used for preservation. Now the year is up and according to the supervisor Jay Schneiderman, it's not a bump but a mountain. East Hampton alone will receive $18 million dollars, an amount almost equal to the town budget. Southampton meanwhile has collected $11 million dollars. The question is, can they spend the money to save land fast enough before the developers get it.

The charter for a new school in East Hampton for mentally retarded children is being held up because of bureacratic technicality. The school has been a long time dream of Dawn Zimmerman and it had been thought because of the fund-raising efforts of people like Kathleen Turner, Jimmy Buffet and Ron Delsener that all the lights had turned green. Apparently not.

Hamptontites Jann Wenner and Jonathan Rose were the recipients of Robert Kennedy Jr's. Forces of Nature Award last week at a fund-raiser in the City for Kennedy's National Resources Defense Council. The event in the City raised more than $600,000, $300,000 less than a benefit the prior week for Kennedy's Riverkeeper Organization. Kennedy is an occasional visitor to Sagaponack when he visits his cousin Caroline. He's an attorney who's accomplished tremendous things in cleaning up pollution in the lakes and rivers upstate New York.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

"Is Willie the Right Whale For Eastern Long Island?"

April 17, 1975

The great whale is back. During the last three weeks, the giant 40,000 pound Atlantic Right Whale has been spotted on two occasions, once off the coast of Hampton Bays, the second time off Westhampton Beach. The last of the sightings was made by Clara Carruci of 209 Dune Road, who watched the whale frolic in the surf off shore for the better part of two hours. She saw him spout, observed his fins, and watched as he playfully lifted his giant black tail in the air and banged it against the surface of the sea. He seemed to be enjoying his lunch.

There has been some speculation that the whale seen in Hampton Bays at least, might have been a different whale from the one we all saw last summer. He was described as being slightly shorter, without the configuration markings on his back. Hogwash we say. It has been almost a generation since a whale has been seen off Long Island shores. Now, within the last eight months, thousands of people have seen Willie the Whale, airplanes have tracked him, helicopters have spotted him, Coast Guard Boats have herded him, and a skindiver from Southampton College has even touched him. Biologyp professors have declared that little Willie (all forty feet of him) has become separated from his herd, and has been swimming around off Long Island trying to head north to find them. He bumps into the island, swimsaway, turns around, and bumps into the island again. He seems to enjoy it. The hell with the herd. A second whale out there, indeed.

But then what do the biologists know? What does anybody know about the thinking of a 40,000 pound Atlantic Right Whale? Down in Florida a couple of years ago, a smaller sea mammal (dolphin) was being trained to leap by some Marineland trainers. The dolphin would leap and the trainer would give him a fish. After awhile, when the dolphin had enough to eat, he simply took the fish and stacked them neatly on the bottom of the pool for later use. Then, when the dolphin got totally bored, he dove to the bottom of the pool, picked up the little fish, and returned them, one by one, to the trainer.

A group of us were sitting around in a bar the other evening, trying to figure out why Willie Whale keeps hanging around Long Island. Came up with the following theories.

THEORY ONE: Willie the Whale has read the book JAWS and is waiting around Long Island so he can give the ~man-eating shark in that book what for.

THEORY TWO: Willie the Whale is not a whale at all, but is a man-eating shark. He is, in fact, the man-eating shark from Jaws but he hasn't yet found anybody who looks tasty enough.

THEORY THREE: Willie the Whale has come to recognize what a great tourist attraction he is. He drew crowds all last summer. Now he's poking around during the winter looking for the best financial offer. He could hang around off Montauk or he could hang around off Southamptopn. Depends on which offers him more plnakton.

THEORY FOUR: Willie the Whale has fallen hopelessly in love with Long Island. The Island is shaped like a fish, it looks like a fish, in fact, it looks like_the biggest fish Willie has ever seen. And there is certainly nothing X-rated about doing a little nuzzling.

THEORY FIVE: Willie the Whale is not a whale at all but a huge, cardboard dummy of a whale, built by the Soviet Union. While the C.I.A. is looking over the Russian fishing fleet off our shores, this big dummy of a whale is keeping all of Long Island under electronic surveilance. Not a potato can grow without Moscow knowing about it.

THEORY SIX: The Federal government doesn't want to frighten us, but Long Island has broken free of it's moorings. Rather than let the island float dangerously out to sea, and rather than offer an expensive bond issue to rebuild the moorings, the government has hired Willie the Whale to keep nudging mthe Island back to its proper place. The island floats off a bit, and Willie nudges it back. He's been doing an excellent job.

We had some other theories about Willie the Whale, but as the hours went by at the bar, the theories grew more disjointed and incoherent for some reason.

This newspaper would be happy to publish any

TWENTY FIVE YEARS AGO

"Seed Potatoes Get Planted In Ground with Mixed Emotions"

April 17, 1975

Ever notice how people in the stock market go crazy when the Dow Jones average goes down ten points? The market fluctuates from 700 points to 735 and everyone goes wild. A change of 5% in the Dow makes the front page of The New York Times. Well, these changes are like nothing when compared to the changes in price our East End potato farmers endure.

The farmers in the Hamptons are right now busy planting about 12,000 acres in potatoes. Their farms are along the beach on both sides of the Montauk Highway, around the villages. As they plant, these farmers keep one eye on the wholesale price of potatoes – the price they can expect to get when the potatoes come out of the ground in the fall. Last year at this time, potatoes were selling for $10.50 per hundred pounds (hundredweight). As the planting goes on this year, that stands around $2.00. A drop of almost 1,000% Certainly this is the biggest fluctuation in price that anyone can remember.

Of course, potatoes will have a different price come September and the harvest. But looking ahead at the number of acres around the nation that got put into potatoes when the price shot up to $10.00, things don't look too good. Maybe some of the big midwestern farmers, seeing the handwriting on the wall, will choose to change over from potatoes to sugar beets. There's good money in sugar beets. But then you never know.

The planting began last Wednesday, April 2, for most of the farmers. That was the day a lot of telephone calls went around from one farmer to another. The ground is now dry enoug'h to be worked. This would be a good day to begin. Two days later it rained cats and. dogs and all work came to a halt. These are the perils of farming.

Farmers have to take a philosophic attitude toward the planting. To produce a hundredweight of potatoes costs about $3. Prospects are that the price this fall will be less than that. For every hundred pounds of potatoes they take to market, they may lose a dollar or so. Not the most wonderful thing to think about while the seed potatoes are going into the ground. Well, last year was a good year anyway.

It has been a warm, wet, almost snowless winter. A lot of biting cold wind. The spring planting is a little bit late. Perhaps we can expect a cool, dry, still spring.

Meanwhile, as you read this, the County of Suffolk is carefully sorting through "bids" to see which of Suffolk County's farmlands they are going to "save." The County has a sixty million dollar war chest and last autumn asked the farmers to sell the County their development rights. The farmers would retain ownership of the land, but they could never use it for anything but farming. Their taxes would be lower. The County would file the development rights and never use them. The farmers would know that their land would remain in agriculture for as long as there was a Suffolk County.

The County suggested that any farmer wishing to do so could offer to~ sell his development rights. The farmer could name his price. If the County liked it, they would buy it. If the county didn't like it, they'd buy somebody else's development rights. But would enough farmers be interested in the proposition?

A sealed bid auction was held about two months ago, and almost twice as many farmers were interested as the Count had money. And the average bid price was $6,500 an acre. Sometime within the next month or two, the County will choose about 10,000 acres to 'save~~ with their sixty million dollars. It is widely believed that as much as one third of all the farms on the South Fork will be accepted into the program. If this turns out to be the case, the South Fork will be well on its way toward the permanent preservatiQn of its valuable and beautiful farmland.

So when you see a farmer planting potatoes this spring, planting potatoes that will cost him nearly hail again more than he gets for them in the fall, stop your car and ask if you can help out. Maybe you can hold the farmer's coat.

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

I don't understand why with all the powerful moneyed people in this area, we can't do more about protecting ourselves. After all, power and money should help. We are living with some of the highest cancer rates in the country. We have the Millstone nuclear plant close to our northern shores. We have Plum Island doing animal research on an island just off our shore. I'm told they are importing international diseases to study at Plum Island. We are still dealing with the residue from DDT that was used for agricultural spraying decades ago. We have toxic waste in Sag Harbor from manufacturing facilities that have been closed for years. Our wells are being fouled by poisons that "run off" the fields and golf courses. The headwaters of Peconic River have been studied. There are radioactive traces in the water. I'm told Brookhaven Lab has contributed to the problem. At least they are trying to clean things up at this point.

I remember a time when garbage didn't seem to be a big problem. Now we have no more landfill areas. There are now transfer stations and our garbage has to be shipped out of here. I loved the old days when you could find treasures at the dump. I understand you still can in East Hampton. The Bridgehampton/Sag Harbor dump is a transfer station.

You throw your presorted garbage into huge containers and it is impossible for anyone to reclaim anything. You can't dump any furniture or anything that won't fit into the pale green, town garbage bags.

I'm always pleased to see people recycle by having yardsales. There is simply too much waste. We can not and should not throw everything we aren't using into the trash. We have had a "throw away" society. We have to change our ways.

I've been told that we are importing diseased ticks and mosquitoes into the area for research purposes. These infected insects are used to introduce diseases into the animals on Plum Island. Is it possible that we actually introduced Lyme disease and West Nile encephalitis by accident? With all the animal protection organizations I'm astounded that this research facility is still in operation. They want to increase the facility. Plum Island was established at a time when there was a relatively small population in this area. With the increase in population one would think that this is no longer a viable place to import diseases for study. Why can't we do anything to protect ourselves?

I love this part of the world. I am happy to live here. I don't think we can solve anything by simply moving away. You can try to run from the problems but the problems we have here are common problems that exist in other places as well. We can't hide. We have to find solutions.

It's an election year. Where do our candidates stand on these issues? We all need to find out who is going to work for us instead of against us. The real estate agents have a lot to lose if land values go down. So do the rest of us. United we have power. Everyone gets a vote. As a community, we can fight back.

MERLOT

SO WERE THE EXPERTS...

We have now held seven blind tastings with wine-industry professionals in New York City, San Francisco, Paris, Sag Harbor (2) and Southold (2).*

Each time we have matched Lenz wines against the best from France and California. Each time the tasters have been surprised to find that Lenz wines comfortably held their own against others costing up to $1,000/bottle!

One of the tasters, a writer from the New York Times, summed it up as follows: "And how do Lenz wines that cost from $10 to $30 stack up in head-to-head competition with French superstars? They equal or surpass them."

* Please see our website for details.

... BUT WE WEREN'T

We knew from our own blind tastings that Lenz wines, starting around the 1993 vintage, were on a par with the very best wines from France and California.

The quality of Lenz wines reflects the extraordinary lengths we go to to create them. In the vineyard, we devote countless hours of attention to the vines --- far beyond the basic minimum required to get a crop.

Low yields and intensive micro-canopy management raise the net cost per ton but result in grapes brimming over with ripe, true-to-variety flavors.

The result is delicious white wines with great intensity, elegance and length and concentrated, powerful reds with ripe, soft tannins. Worldbeaters.

"Beyond Boundaries" was on exhibit at the Benson Gallery in Bridgehampton Friday, April 14th. It was a showing of the art of The Hayground School. The project culminated on Tuesday, March 28th with a New York art opening at The Ricco Maresca Gallery. The Elaine Benson Gallery was packed with gallery-goers, children, participating artists and Hayground school supporters, the atmosphere was electric.

BOSSA NOVA - THE DANCE OF LOVE

Rio by the sea, background music by Jobim, intertwined love stories - there are certainly worse ways to spend an evening. Sony Pictures Classics held a special screening for their new movie Bossa Nova, produced and directed by the Barreto family and starring Amy Irving. Director Bruno Barreto and Amy Irving are husband and wife, in life, not the movie. The story is sweet and reminds you of the Italian and French romantic comedies of the '80s where everything went right, then wrong, then right again. Even the guests all seemed sweet.

Shop 'til You Drop.....With Maria Tennariello

While I was lolly gogging around in Westhampton Beach I stopped into La De Da Antiques (love this name) on Moniebogue Lane. This is a beautiful shop with lots of lovely antiques, gifts and home accessories. Stop in and see what I mean.

Another shop that was very interesting that I visited was Excentricities on Main Street in Westhampton Beach. Design, home furnishings and accessories are some of the wonders in this nice shop.

Off to the Cashmere Outlet on Jobs Lane In Southampton to find a ten day only "Sample Sale" that will be starting on April 20 through April 30. Cashmere Outlet is featuring a "one-of-a-kind" cashmere sweater sale that includes men's and women's fashions that will be slashed at their wholesale cost. You definitely get the buy of the week here at this comfy, cozy store.

Also in Southampton on Main Street stop into the John Rogers Collection Outlet and check out the beautiful authentic reproductions of British and Dutch Colonial furniture, teak and mahogany. All this at up to 70% off retail prices. John Rogers Collection is stocked with factory seconds, overstocks and special purchases. Go for it!

Getting those guestrooms ready for the upcoming season? Well, do I have a scoop for you! Hildreth's Department Store, Main Street, Southampton is having a "Spring has Sprung" Sealy sale with mattress prices starting at $99. And, free local delivery, set-up and removal in most cases.

Instead of mattresses, how about pearls? If you buy three pearls at Rose Jewelers also on Main Street, Rose will give you one free during Add-A-Pearl Week, April 17 through April 22. You can purchase a beautiful starter necklace for $39.95 (regularly $52) and start your own tradition by adding to it every year. Think Mother's Day, think pearls.

On Cameron Street in Southampton at Charos Custom Sound, home of audio/video for over twenty-seven years has lots to be excited about. They do pre-wiring for audio/video, telephone systems, DSS Satellite systems, big screen TV's, home theater, computer networking and more.

Have you been to Glorioso's on Main Street in Bridgehampton recently? Look for the great cotton sweaters in all spring solid colors for only $30. My co-worker Jennifer filled her entire closet with this great buy! Nearby, at C. W. Mercantile you will find the newest rage, Capri's in cotton or stretch fabrics with colorful borders for a hem, $150. Ok Jen; know you only bought one pair. Hey, but that's all you need!

Spring has also arrived in East Hampton and in case you haven't noticed, Sean, on 66 Newtown Lane, has the perfect spring shirts – in an array of eleven colors drawn from a bold and fresh palette. Available in an Easter basket of colors, from robin's egg blue and lavender, to lilac and rose – even a clean, breezy white, these linen shirts will raise any man's spirits!

Made of the finest Italian fabric, the shirts are versatile and uniquely detailed with mother-of-pearl buttons. The soft collar stays firm when opened and gives the look of a crisp dress shirt. The bottom, however, is finished to wear the shirt outside the pants for a more casual look.

Sean, with two stores in Manhattan featuring the casual and sophisticated clothes of French designer Emile Lafaurie, celebrates its first spring in East Hampton.

Sag Harbor Fireplace on Bay Street has a brand new location and is the home of the "Big Green Egg" the worlds best smoker and grill. Sag Harbor Fireplace installs wood and gas fireplaces and stoves, fireplace restorations, chimney linings, caps, dampers, crowns and more. A fine source for glass fireplace doors, mantels and hearth accessories, consultations and troubleshooting.

Well, this is a great ending to a great day of shopping. Guess what? Can't wait til next week. Until next week. Ciao and Happy Easter and Spring Shopping!

DAN TRAVELS

From Here To There

SAN DIEGO:

An elderly man who made his living as a traveling salesman once told me he believed there were only three cities with "character" in North America, – Quebec, New Orleans and San Francisco. At the time – I was perhaps a budding teenager – it seemed to make sense. Now I am not quite so sure.

Although San Diego has a 400 year history, it didn't really get to be well known beyond the confines of California until it was "discovered" by the Navy during World War II.

These days because of its fine, even warm weather, its historic background, its good roads, its friendly atmosphere, full menu of things to see and to do, its wealth of accommodations at many levels, San Diego makes a fine vacation destination – not for just one or two days, but a full week. Visitors can enjoy a few days or many, and still find interesting, even unusual things to see and do."

For some, just being on, or near the water is exhilarating for it comes in many sizes and shapes, most of them with accessible beaches. While this bay access may mean more to the locals than to visitors, few who come here can ignore the marine wealth which provides excellent fishing, boating, water sports, even the ever-changing lure of simply "driving around.

Then too, the city, now has one of the state's most popular urban areas, one that begs to be absorbed – which is probably the best word for the city's many attractions. To be fully appreciated, San Diego needs to be absorbed , savoured, understood and taken-to-heart. The city's inexpensive trolley-bus layout, run on the honor system, is an open invitation to "ride to the end and transfer or return."

Actually, it's even possible to ride (for $1.50 round trip for Seniors) all the way to Tijuana. Except for the last few hundred feet you actually walk across the border into Mexico – with practically no fuss. Mexican crafts are in general not of the highest calibre, but diligent searching will produce some real trophies, such as the imaginative wooden animals of today's top carvers.

After the tempting bay (take a closeup visit of the famous red and white Coronado Hotel on the outer beach), the residential areas and the fabled trolley trip (about a half hour one way).

Among the city's "must do" activities are the collection of museums high above the city – where Tuesday is usually good for free admission. Warning – depending upon your interests, you'll want to spend prime time enjoying.

Back in the city you learn about Old Town. On LI and elsewhere in the East, there would be a tendency to add an "e" to both words, but in San Diego a local booster claims, "Why add two more letters? Our visitors can read. There you can concentrate on the array of hand-crafted items from enormous garden pots to cleverly strung beads of all varieties and all price range. The temptations are many but for those who didn't come here by car out for soft items such as clothing, handbags and small ornamental glass, Old Town is the place.

Finally I've come to the difficult part – finding a link to Long Island. By a long stretch, this, too, is a resort area. Over half the people seen on the streets are probably visitors – as is the case in the Hamptons from spring through until the Christmas holidays.

Then, too, San Diego can not be divorced from the presence of the nearby ocean, the Pacific rather than the Atlantic. This means the ahundance of seafood – with restaurants specializing on a number of methods of preparation such as are found in Greenport, Montauk and their waterfront neighbors.

–Eunice Juckett Meeker

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

THE RED BARN ATELIER

Environment is everything in establishing the tone and temper of an art exhibit. Last week's foray into children's art at the Hayground School proved that magical moments were still possible when creative endeavors were invigorating and original. Another special space where similar dynamics are occuring is at The Red Barn Atelier, a group of buildings set off from a busy Southampton thoroughfare. Like the Hayground School, it exists in a world of its own.

The property, which resembles a hacienda, has been taken over by Spanish artist, Gines Serran- Pagan, and includes a large renovated barn for exhibits and living spaces, a separate studio now being built, and various outhouses where goats, chickens and sheep are kept. What we have here is a farm, art gallery and studio all combined into one charming compound.

The invigoration and originality come not only from the use of the buildings but also from the complete surprise we feel when encountering such a place. Where else can we see art on the walls and then go out and feed the sheep with corn or help ourselves to freshly laid eggs?

The multi-functional compound is also reflected in the diversity of the permanent artifacts existing alongside the art exhibit: masks and pottery from Africa are particularly arresting, their tactile sensibilities fitting in quite appropriately with works by Darlene Charneco. Mr. Serran-Pagan's abstracts also evoke the formal qualities of Ms. Charneco's window/door configurations and emphasis on texture.

Works by Eric Ernst (who is also involved with developing The Red Barn) offer a different vision with geometric abstractions that oddly enough recall archetypical figures – all the more relevant since many of the art/artifacts on display owe their origins to primal sources.

A special evening of "Words and Music" demonstrated The Red Barn's commitment to diversity as well. This time, it was the bond between art forms that was emphasized in a performance featuring music by Bill King, monologues by Carl Welden and poetry by Siv Cidring, Denise Lassaw and Alex Russo. Most intriguing was Mr. Welden's use of his voice and sound as a medium – his aural technique reminscent of Laurie Anderson's concerts. (Mr. Welden didn't employ any of Ms. Anderson's computer equipment, however, preferring to keep it simple with using ordinary pipes instead.)

Call 631-287-3747 for information about the next exhibit.

WHEN IN NEW YORK...

Gastronomic Guides To Greenwich Village

By Allison Wiley

With hundreds of restaurants in a thirty-five block radius, it is easy to be overwhelmed with the selection of restaurants in Greenwich Village. You could get lost in one of the many NYC restaurant guides, take someone else's recommendation, read a menu in the window of a restaurant and take a chance, or just keep going back to the same few places you are familiar with. Finding a touristy or commercialized restaurant is easy; however, locating ones with delicious food, charming décor and good service at a reasonable price is not. Foods of New York Walking and Eating Tours of Historic Greenwich Village can make the process simply delicious. During the tour, you will visit places from "Old Time New York" dating back to the turn of the century as well as the newer, cozy and quaint ones. You'll visit unique restaurants, cafes and bistros, classic bread and pastry shops, cheese and butcher shops, NY style pizzerias, ethnic eateries, a village speakeasy and other points of interest. Once you have learned the pertinent information about these wonderful establishments, you can return with confidence and enjoy the New York City food experience that has helped to make this city the gastronomic capital of the world. The guides are very knowledgeable and will tell you about house specialties, secrets, insiders stories and even point you toward the best seat in the house. During the tour you will visit eighteen establishments and sample ten types of delicious food- some of the best fare in the Village-

HONORING THE ARTIST: PAM TOPHAM

Meeting tapestry artist Pam Topham for the first time often prompts an unusual response: “She reminds me of someone, but I can’t quite put my finger on it.” For this writer at least, Ms. Topham initially conjured up Meridith Baxter Birney who played Michael Fox’s mother in the popular TV series, Family Ties. Not only is Ms. Topham blond and attractive like Ms. Baxter Birney, but she also has a similar demeanor – a person who manages to reconcile her 1960s sensibilities with modern times.

Not that we would label Ms. Topham a “flower child,” although she has called herself “an old hippy” on occasion. But there is a resemblance to a hippy lifestyle in the casual, often hand-made, clothes that she wears with their beautiful Southwestern colors. There’s also her respect for texture and material, but not “materialism.” Ms. Topham’s home mirrors such a likeness with its abundance of hand-crafted objects, texture and colors as well.

It’s no wonder that Ms. Topham’s penchant for texture and hand-wrought items has lead her to the creation of tapestries. Even so, she never followed traditional tapestry techniques. “I spent years doing what I could get away with,” she notes with good humor.

While Ms. Topham holds a B. A. in painting and costume design from Syracuse University, she never took the usual route when it came to her art. “I’m semi self-taught,” she explains, “because I didn’t use ‘true’ methods when I did tapestry, the ‘over, under’ approach. I do things like ‘over three, under one.’ Some threads are woven, some are stitched. I also use different weights and yarns.” Currently, Ms. Topham is experimenting with a technique that consists of two layers, where weaving on the top enables us to see the weaving behind it.

Pam Topham

Ms. Topham is untraditional in other ways, seeking out just the right sites for her endeavors. She notes: “Having lived most of my life in an uncommonly beautiful place of wetlands, farmland, endless sea and sky, I also travel to find other settings of similar and contrasting aesthetic inspiration.”

While this week’s cover was inspired by Fresh Pond Inlet and its Autum light, Ms. Topham has also journeyed with younger daughter, Eliza, to the Southeast and Taos, the Badlands and most recently, the Pacific Northwest to find additional inspirations.

This coming summer, she will no doubt find inspiration of another sort when she visits older daughter, Maya, in San Francisco. There she has promised to teach weaving at a center for disadvantaged adults where Maya, an artist herself, volunteers.

Ms. Topham has other plans where her experimentation/teaching will continue: this summer she will be instructing local children at The Center for the Arts (“I always get a fresh look at things from kids,” she says); she may possibly also get to the Canary Islands one day (she’d love to create a tapestry of hillside terraces).

No matter where her travels take her, however, one thing is certain. Ms. Topham has no intention of going along with the “crowd.” As she herself remarks, “I have always worked in isolation.” Sounds like something Meridith Baxter Birney would say.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Topham’s tapestries are currently on view at the Arlene Bujese Gallery in East Hampton until April 30; her two-layered tapestries will be on display at Bridgehampton’s Elaine Benson Gallery from June 3-20. Photo of cover by John Reed.

Dan's Papers "They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival 2000

Last Summer (1969)

Dan's Papers Film Festival matinee last Saturday, at the Ross School Library was downright sybaritic. Sighs of contentment were almost deafening. The audience was squishing around in the huge soft leather covered sofas and chairs enjoying the luxury of the warm wood-paneled chamber. There wasn't a clam out there in the bay that was happier... or as wet... as we were inside, away from the cold rain. Everyone's damp tootsies were relaxed. It wasn't until the title, David and Lisa came up on the big screen, that the comfort became quieter. The engrossing 1963 film, done in undated black and white, had everyone up on their hind quarters, kind of begging for more. This Saturday's movie is made by the same Hamptons people who did David and Lisa and it's a real zinger so, I suggest you make reservations now, and you might also reserve for the following Saturday's snappy thriller, Masquerade. Call 537-0500.

Last Summer, was adapted from the movie by Evan Hunter by then husband and wife team, Frank Perry, director and Eleanor Perry, screenwriter. As with David and Lisa, their first film, Last Summer encompasses the world of teenagers. This story depicts the last summer of innocence for four youngsters bristling with growing pains of burgeoning sexuality, confused identity and anticipated excitement of new and varied experiences. Their capsulated evolution from fresh tanned kids to detonated adolescent bitterness builds day by day, on the sunny summer beaches of Fire Island. With each play-time, prankish experiment getting bolder and bolder, they expose the flaws and weaknesses hiding in their pubescent bodies and minds infiltrated by societal woes. As their darkest imperfections are brought to a head, as if drawn out by the dizzying bright sun, their actions ultimately become mindless.

This is no tuneful Beach Party , Frankie Avalon whoop-dee-do! Originally X rated it had been reedited to an R Rating. The cuts are apparent, and, at that, by today's standards, the film is powerful but, not outrageously flagrant.

Two gleaming, gangling youths, Richard Thomas as Peter and Bruce Davidson as Dan enjoy the beach and bathing but, the sands and dunes lack something. That void is filled to the brim, when they meet Sandy played by Barbara Hershey. She's attractive, voluptuous, wears bikinis and uses adult language. They are smitten. They're all over her and she enjoys having them there. Dan is going for the ultimate, egged on by her topless frankness. Peter is less ambitious but, certainly would welcome sex. He is more circumspect and especially happy about the vivacious fun and games Sandy provides them.

In the midst of their fun comes a cute little troubled girl with freckles and big braces and they allow her into their very personal world, partly as another plaything, like beer and shampoo. Perhaps it is her introspection that throws their relationship spinning out of control... leading to a shocking climax.

The cinematography is so golden, and sun-hazy you might feel as if you've spent a day at the beach. At any rate, it may temper the stunning conclusion of the movie.

Before the movie we will screen the short video from LTV's studio Out of the Attic by Fred Camman. It is a trip down Memory Lane with historical costumes from the collection of the Bridge Hampton Historical Society. Let's see you there. Rain or shine, please attend. It's absolutely free. Let's chat and compare notes at 3:00 p.m. on Saturday, April 22nd at 18 Goodfriend Drive (off Route 114), East Hampton.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

The week before Easter Sunday, one of the most important and oldest of Christian celebrations begins with Palm Sunday and continues through Holy Thursday, Good Friday, and concluded this Sunday April. 23rd.

Once of the joys of Easter is that it signals the beginning of spring. The inspired cook can create a holiday dinner with the welcome abundance of asparagus, artichokes, lamb and other spring delicacies. Many dishes traditionally served at Easter have a deep-rooted heritage and lamb is probably the most celebratory food to grace the holiday table.

The most popular cut of lamb for Easter is the whole leg – oven ready. Lamb is viewed as a healthy meat as it has no marbling and it is easy to trim away any excess fat. An intensely flavorful roast with a profusion of garlic and herbs, served with a warm garlic sauce can be seasoned up to a day ahead before cooking.

For dessert this year you might like to bake a traditional Italian cheesecake. One that is appropriate for Easter is from Susan G. Purdy's, Have Your Cake and Eat it Too, 200 Luscious Low-Fat Cakes, Pies, Cookies, Puddings, and Other Desserts You Thought You Would Never Eat Again, Morrow. Her Lemon Ricotta Cheesecake incorporates dried fruits with a mix of low fat dairy product such as ricotta, cream cheese and yogurt. And of course, you can bake it ahead. Have a Happy Easter.

ROAST LEG OF LAMB WITH GARLIC SAUCE

Twelve garlic cloves are poached and pureed to infuse the sauce. The garlic is cooked until its strength is disarmed, rendering a slightly sweet flavor.

Serves 8-10

1 6-6 1/2 lb. leg of lamb, weight after trimming
1 tablespoon fresh rosemary leaves
1 tablespoon fresh thyme leaves
1 tablespoon fresh marjoram leaves
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 large onion, thinly sliced
1 tablespoon grainy Dijon mustard
1 1/2 cups chicken stock
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
12 unpeeled garlic cloves

1. Trim and discard any excess fat from the leg. Combine herbs and rub into all surfaces of the meat. Refrigerate, lightly covered with plastic wrap for several hours or overnight.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees.
2. In a large heavy roasting pan, melt butter with oil, straddling two burners if necessary. When fat is sizzling, put in the roast, adjust heat and brown the meat slowly on all sides. Put onions in the pan and saute, stirring for 3-4 minutes until golden brown. Stir in mustard, then pour in 3/4 cup stock and stir to deglaze pan drippings. Season meat and onions with a sprinkle of salt and pepper.

3. Place meat in preheated oven and roast for 30 minutes, basting meat with pan juices and remaining stock every 15 minutes or so. Reduce oven heat to 375 degrees and continue to roast and baste for 30-45 minutes longer until medium rare, (faintly pink within - as it should be) and springy to the touch or 135-140 degrees on an instant thermometer).

4. While lamb is roasting, poach garlic cloves in boiling water for 10-12 minutes or until soft enough to puree. Peel the cloves and, with the back of a wooden spoon, force through a sieve.

5. When lamb is done, transfer meat to a carving board and let stand for 10-15 minutes before carving. Carefully degrease pan juices and return roasting pan to burner top. Add pureed garlic to the juices and stir to mix. If some evaporation has taken place, add a little more stock or water to the pan and bring to the edge of a boil. Taste for salt and pepper and adjust seasoning if necessary. Carve from the shank end towards the leg bone in thin parallel slices and transfer to warm dinner plates. Spoon over warm garlic sauce and serve with roasted new potatoes and fresh asparagus.

To Prepare Ahead: Follow step 1 up to one day before. Follow step 2 up to several hours ahead. Complete steps 3-5 before serving.

LEMON RICOTTA CHEESECAKE

Torta di ricotta is a famous Italian specialty. It is made in different versions depending upon the region of the country and is particularly appropriate for Easter.

Yield: one 8-inch cake

CRUST
Butter-flavor no-stick cooking spray
2 1/2 tablespoons Grape-nuts or Cheerios cereal
1 tablespoon chopped walnuts
1 tablespoon granulated sugar
Pinch cinnamon

FILLING
1/3 cup golden raisins
1/3 cup dried apricots
1/3 cup dark rum or Kirsch or fresh orange juice
1 3/4 cups skim-milk ricotta cheese
3 ounces low-fat cream cheese, at room temperature
3/4 cup granulated sugar
1/4 cup nonfat plain yogurt
1 large egg, separated, plus 2 large egg whites
1 teaspoon grated lemon zest
2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
1/4 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
Pinch salt
Grated nutmeg or 1 tablespoon lightly toasted pine nuts, optional

1. Position a rack in the center of the oven and preheat to 375 degrees. Coat an 8-inch springform pan with cooking spray. If pan is aluminum, line bottom with baking parchment or wax paper and spray.

2. Combine the crust ingredients in a food processor and blend to fine crumbs. Add crumbs to pan, tilt and rotate the pan to coat.

3. Combine the raisins, apricots and rum or juice in a small microwaveable bowl; partially cover with plastic wrap and microwave on high for 15-20 seconds to heat through, or simmer in a small pan over low heat about 5 minutes. Set aside for 20 minutes.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Notable Chefs Of The Hamptons

John O'Connell loves his work and it is reflected in his aromatically flavored, cutting edge fusion food at Tsunami Restaurant in East Hampton, NY where he is the executive chef.

Although it wasn't what he planned to do when he "grew up," John's culinary career began when he worked in a restaurant during High School in Staten Island where he lived. John continued to work at the same restaurant through his college years while he studied chemistry. There was something about the excitement, the camaraderie and the team work in those restaurant years that helped him decide to make the kitchen, and not the chemistry lab, his personal laboratory. He enrolled in the CIA, the Culinary Institute of America, at the age of twenty-two. His formal training there led to a journey that took him to Europe after a stint in Los Angeles. Then, through a connection at the Dutch consulate, he was hired to work at the Amstel Hotel in Amsterdam. During his two year experience there John traveled to some of the great cities of Europe where he enjoyed and absorbed European culture and cuisine.

After the harsh winters of Holland, John decided he would like the warmer climate of the Caribbean and spent a year in both St. Thomas and Puerto Rico. He returned to New York City and became the chef at Pisces, a restaurant in the East Village. His big break came when he was invited to reopen the legendary Lundy's, the famous fish restaurant in Brooklyn, as executive chef and fish buyer. He stayed for two years when Tsunami – and the East End of Long Island – beckoned.

John O'Connell

John had taken on more than the responsibilities of executive chef, at the restaurant. He not only had the luxury of time to research his menu, to develop the style of Asian recipes the restaurant owner, Frank Cilione, envisioned, but was directly involved in the design, creation and execution of the kitchen. An experience that he and his sous chef Chris Pizzulli thoroughly delighted in.

John O'Connell had a solid foundation in the culinary arts and he loved the challenge of creating a new and exciting menu that would appeal to the restaurant's discriminating clientele. There are no boundaries for John at Tsunami, he has the freedom to meld the strong influence of Asian cooking with his European culinary education at the restaurant. And it works. No doubt his four years of chemistry training plays a significant role in the science of cooking as John understands the chemical changes, the chemical breakdown and the makeup of what goes into creating a dish. At Tsunami, which means "tidal wave" in Japanese, John is making waves of his own with his boldly flavored dishes.

Tsunami opened on Memorial Day in 1999 serving dinner only. The restaurant is open year 'round, and this winter they began serving Sunday brunch. A tasting of John's incredible brunch dishes yielded attractively plated dim sum consisting of battered shrimp on a "stick," delicate steamed shitake dumplings, crisp Chicken sate and a remarkable spring roll with a palate pleasing filling of goat cheese, broccoli rabe and spicy taso ham, for a bit of a kick. Thai duck omelette, a popular brunch dish, consists of a large slice of roasted duck wrapped in a tender omelet with shitake mushrooms, diced tomato, scallion garnish and a Thai dipping barbecue sauce, a well balanced mix of soy, ketchup, scallion, garlic and rice vinegar. It might be an old-fashioned idea but the subtle taste of ketchup on the egg was delicious. The

4. Meanwhile, place the ricotta in a strainer set over a bowl and allow to drain for about 10 minutes. Discard liquid in the bowl, then force ricotta through the strainer into the bowl with the back of a large wooden spoon.

5. In the large bowl of an electric mixer, beat the cream cheese until smooth. Beat in 1/2 cup of the sugar. Scrape down the bowl and beaters and add the ricotta, yogurt, egg yolk, lemon zest and lemon juice. Beat well to blend thoroughly, then beat in the flour and salt. Stir in the drained raisins and apricots.

6. In a clean, grease-free bowl, using clean beaters, whip the egg whites until foamy. Gradually add the remaining 1/4 cup sugar and whip until the egg whites are stiff but not dry. Fold the whites into the batter.

7. Turn the batter into the prepared pan and smooth out the top. Dust the top lightly with nutmeg or toasted pine nuts, if desired. Set the pan on a heavy baking sheet and bake for 45-50 minutes, or until the edges of the cake are lightly golden and the center is firm to the touch. Turn off the oven and leave cake inside with the door closed for 1 hour. Then set the cake on a rack in a draft-free location and let cool completely. Can be baked up to one day in advance, cooled and refrigerated. Do not freeze. Serve at room temperature.

Notable Chef

watercress and Belgian endive salad is a winning mix of roasted Asian pear, candied walnuts and Roquefort cheese in a piquant rice wine vinaigrette. When the Tsunami Stack was served we decided to save it for dessert. The crisp-edged layered pancakes made with Tahitian vanilla batter were fluffy and satisfyingly homespun. They're served with a colorful mix of fresh berries, a bit of sweetened whipped cream and pure Vermont maple syrup.

And brunch would not be complete without a mimosa or a bloody Mary. Tsunami's mimosa is prepared with fresh orange juice, Pacific echo (Vueve Clicquot) champagne with a touch of grenadine giving the mix a brilliant blood orange color and rich taste. If you order the Bloody Mary, contains fresh horseradish, Worcestershire and a touch of wasabi, get ready for an extra kick.

Tsunami's dinner menu boasts the popular sha-shang duck with scallion pancake, a mix of wild mushrooms and John's homemade Thai barbecue sauce with a drizzle of Italian truffle oil. The miso and sake marinated Chilean sea bass, served on a bed of haricot verte, a fine julienne of carrot, red and yellow pepper and jicama in a sweet Vietnamese chili sauce is another favorite on the dinner menu. While John's dishes have a definite Asian twist the menu is influenced by his ability to focus on aromatic flavors that have a start, a middle and a finish. His inspired tempura-fried banana split coated in panko, the coarse Japanese bread crumb, is created on this basis for one of the exciting desserts at dinner. A can't-wait-to-have and a delicious reason to return to Tsunami.

Shamin, Tsunami's attentive and attractive hostess, beautifully garbed in exotic Chinese dress, will see to your every comfort and your wine questions. Her philosophy of matching food with wines is enthusiastic and professional.

The banquette lined dining room, the Kangi (Japanese script) on the conical columns around dark tables lit with votive candles gives the room a bit of Oriental mystery. Tsunami features a bar/lounge and supper club with a main dance floor in an interesting setting of plush raised banquettes and an outdoor patio through multiple French doors off the main room. The club is open on Friday and Saturday nights.

We truly savored brunch at Tsunami which is served every Sunday from 11:am to 3:00pm. The restaurant is currently open for dinner Thursday through Sunday evening. After May 1, they will be open Sunday, Monday and Thursday from 5:30 to 10:pm, and Friday and Saturday from 5:30 to 11:pm.

After July 4th, the restaurant will be open 7 days a week for the "summer" season. Call 631-329 6000 for reservations.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Chef John O'Connell Serves Up Tsunami Stack

TSUNAMI STACK

Chef John O'Connell interprets his Tsunami "Stack" as Tahitian vanilla pancakes with fresh berries, whipped cream and Pure Vermont Maple syrup.

Serves 4

FOR THE PANCAKES

2 cups all purpose flour
2 tablespoons baking powder
3 tablespoons powdered sugar
7 eggs, beaten
6 tablespoons melted butter plus extra for the griddle
1 cup milk
Seeds scraped from the pods of 3 vanilla beans
Fresh berries, whipped cream and maple syrup for serving

1. Measure the flour into a dry measuring cup. Combine the dry ingredients, flour, baking power and sugar in a large bowl. In a smaller bowl, stir together the liquid ingredients, eggs, milk and melted butter. Stir (never beat) in the liquid ingredients to the dry all at once. If the batter seems to thick, stir in a little more milk, a little at a time, until the consistency is a little thicker than heavy cream.
Gently fold in the vanilla beans to mix.

2. Heat a griddle pan or non-stick skillet and drizzle a little melted butter over the surface of the pan. Using a small, 1/4-cup ladle with a long handle, slowly pour the batter in one spot on the preheated surface for a 3-inch pancake. Adjust heat to medium-low and cook until the tops are covered with small bubbles and the bottoms are lightly browned. Carefully turn with a wide spatula and lightly brown the other side. Repeat with remaining batter. Keep warm as they are done in a 180 degree oven. Serve with a mix of fresh berries, a drizzle of maple syrup and a bit of lightly sweetened whipped cream if desired.

Interior & EXTERIORS

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

Although they are forgiving plants and will grow in sun, rhododendrons prefer partial shade. This is especially important during the hottest part of the day when their leaves can easily burn. A woodland setting is ideal, but trees, houses, or other structures can also provide protection from the harsh afternoon sun.

Rhododendrons are acid – loving plants. A pH of 5.6 is ideal, so take a soil test before planting. If your soil is too alkaline, add some peat moss or elemental sulfur (5) to the planting hole. The soil testing lab will tell you what is required. For soil testing; Spring Meadow Organic Farming and Gardening Research Center, 631-725-5725.

Since soggy, wet roots account for the most common and most serious rhododendron problems, root rot, stem dieback, and fungi, providing good drainage is the most important step you can take to ensure the long term health of your plants.

When planting, disregard the old rule for planting shrubs that calls for digging a hole at least twice as deep as the root ball. Instead, dig a shallow hole twice as wide as the root ball. A six foot plant could have a four foot wide root ball. Growing in pure bark, its root mass will be twice as wide as it would be if it had been grown in heavy soil. A healthy root ball is generally about three times wider than it is deep.

Deep holes in heavy soil tend to create a bucket effect, Holding water at the root level. Wide, shallow holes encourage excess water to seep outward, away from roots. The depth of your hole will be determined by your soil-type, but in general, rhododendrons prefer shallow planting.

If you have a sandy soil with good drainage, dig a hole the depth of the root ball and plant your rhododendron at the same depth it grew in the container. For heavy, clay based soil, dig a shallower hole. You can place the top of the root ball as much as several inches above ground, mounding the planting medium from the edge of the hole up and over the top of the root ball.

To facilitate drainage and moisture retention, planting holes should be filled with roughly one part garden soil and two parts humus.

We like mixing equal parts of coarse and fine materials. A coarse material like bark chips creates a space for air and promotes drainage, while a fine material like compost retains moisture and nutrients.

Although rhododendrons don't like soggy soil, they do need plenty of water. This is especially important for recently planted rhododendrons, because their roots are slow to grow out into the surrounding soil. Try watering more often, but not as deeply. Drip irrigation is ideal because it provides just the right amount of water that can be taken up by the roots.

Also, keep in mind that rhododendron root balls are very dense. Once they dry out, they are difficult to rewet; in fact, they are even capable of shedding water. If you suspect that the roots are not absorbing water, often evidenced by leaf wilt or curl, or flowers that droop, drop immediately, or don't open at all, try gouging a small hole into the center of the root mass to direct water to the roots. On occasion, we've dug up a dried out plant that is still of manageable size and soaked the entire root ball overnight in a container of water, with a mix of fish/seaweed.

Mulching helps prevent rhododendron roots from drying out; keeps plants cool in summer; protects roots from sudden shifts in winter soil temperature; and prevents weeds from competing for moisture. In their natural environment, these shrubs provide their own leaves as mulch and take advantage of the leaves of surrounding trees. In our garden, we mulch with the same coarse bark that we use when planting because it allows air and water to reach the roots. We never use black plastic, and fine peat moss will tend to dry out and shed water like a thatched roof.

Note: Never pile mulch up on the stem because it

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

One thing I can say about working for Farm Bureau – life is never boring. This past week was quite exciting. On Friday, our executive board and I attended the Long Island Association (LIA) executive breakfast at Crest Hollow Country Club in Woodbury. The First Lady, Hillary Rodham Clinton, was the guest speaker. LIA President Matt Crosson mentioned that Mayor Guiliani had also been invited to speak, but had not yet responded.

About 1,400 people attended the sold-out event. It was the first time we had a chance to hear her speak in person. I will tell you that she wowed the audience. Mrs. Clinton spoke mostly about the economy and what she would do, if elected as U.S. Senator, to ensure that our economic prosperity continues. Regardless of anyones politics, I think we were all captivated by her speech. She was articulate, dynamic and sincere in delivering her message.

After the breakfast was over, we LIFB guys had an opportunity to meet her personally and have some photos taken. Mrs. Clinton was very nice and very charming. It was an honor for all of us to meet her. There is no doubt that she will be out on the East End this Spring to learn about East End issues. We will brief her about the national concerns that we have in the farming industry. The mayor is going to have a battle on his hands in the upcoming campaign for Senate. Competition is a good thing for democracy, and believe me, it is going to be an interesting race!

The other exciting event this week was the American Planning Association Convention in New York City. I was invited by Suffolk County Planning Director Steve Jones to give a presentation on the Purchase of Development Rights (PDR) Program. Joe Baer (retired) of the Suffolk County Health Department, and Jim Tripp, Chairman of the Pine Barrens Transfer of Development Rights (TDR) Clearinghouse, gave presentations on other preservation methods. There were 6,000 professional planners from around the US and other countries on hand for this weeklong conference and tours. As time goes on, many of the programs developed in Suffolk County, such as PDR, are being used around the country. Thirty-seven states have farmland preservation programs, many designed similarly to Suffolk Countys'.

So, after a busy, exciting week, I'm packing up the family for vacation. We are off to Margaritaville – at least in our minds we are!

might rot. Arrange it away from the trunk, creating a ring on top of the periphery of the root ball that will catch the water and direct it to the roots of the plant.

In areas where the ground does not freeze, rhododendrons take up and store food during the winter months. Therefore, organic fertilizer can be applied in January, after the plants go dormant, again in March, and a final feeding in June. Avoid applying fertilizer in the fall; this can delay dormancy and cause the plants to be less cold hardy in the first freezes. For established plants, which need less fertilizer, and for those grown in very cold areas, fertilize once in early spring and again in June. Select an organic fertilizer prepared for acid loving plants. Rhododendros need an extra dose of nitrogen (N) to grow and bud well. We prefer a organic formula that is higher in (N) and use a 8-6-4, that releases nitrogen (N) over a long period.

Deadheading and pinching keep these ornamentals compact and in good shape. We deadhead to speed the plant into flower production for the coming year and to make the plant look tidier.

After deadheading, the plant sends up growth buds where the bloom was. On the part of the shrub that did not bloom, there is usually only a single growth bud, which we pinch out. After the single bud has been removed the plant immediately produces multiple growth buds there. These result in additional branches and a bushier plant. It is possible to prune rhododendrons if they get too big for your site. But if you cut back heavily, you won't have flowers for a year or two because they flower on the previous year's growth.

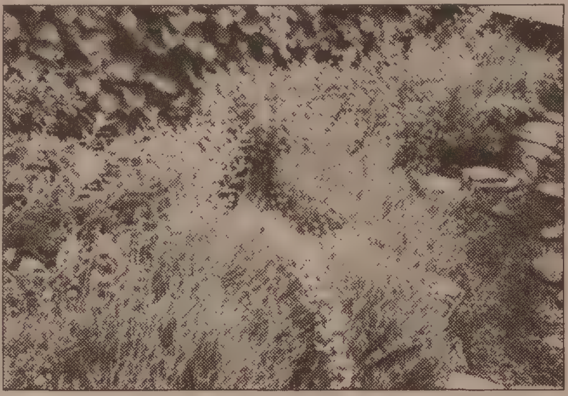
Great Designs For Herbal Gardens

Herbs are among the easiest of plants to grow and enjoy. An herb garden, even in a single pot or in an old whiskey barrel on a patio or deck, can add beauty and make a big difference in your cooking or your life!

The best design for an herbal garden is the classic formal scheme. Geometry makes a perfect frame for the loose, natural look of most plants. A small plot, rectangular or square, enclosed by a clipped hedge or a picket fence. A central feature, perhaps a simple teepee of bamboo stakes lashed together, forms the heart of the garden and also marks the crossing of the garden's main axes. You can sneak in a morning glory and sweet peas for color and fragrance. Creating raised beds keeps the weeds away, makes harvesting easier, and improves soil and drainage. Paths can be topped with pea gravel and beds framed with bricks or stone. The four surrounding beds feature edges planted with lavender. The beds are completely filled with every herb imaginable. Herbs provide flowers, fragrance, flavor and color.



Garden by Frederico Azevedo

Some herbs grow well in partial shade but most need full sun to flourish. Herbs like to breathe, so don't crowd them. Water and feed them frequently, and remember that well drained soil is essential. To prepare the bed, turn the soil as deeply as possible, either by hand or with a rototiller and smooth out any lumps with a garden rake. Add compost, peat, or well-rotted manure and lime to raise the Ph. Herbs are pest resistant and grow better in evenly moist, but well-drained soil that is rich in organic matter.

Herbs can grow in mixed flowerbeds and among shrubs. Plant the ones with fragrant and soft groundcovers. Herbal trees, such as linden or hawthorn, provide aromatic essences with natural cleansing properties. Herbal groundcovers, such as mint, make an excellent tea.

Herbs make you think of the good life: sunshine, clean air, and simple home-cooked foods with a deep flavor. Herbs are the essential spices for your garden.

Creating A Serene Scene

This is the time of the year we usually do our spring cleaning and re-decorating. It just comes naturally. I'm not much of a garden person, so I concentrate inside the house, move furniture around, take stuff out, add stuff, change my accessories, just recreate. I enjoy changing the comforter sets, curtains, bathroom accessories, update everything.

Whether you are redecorating or updating your home, the costs involved can be overwhelming. Are you looking for affordable ways to transform your home without spending a fortune? Is the merchandise an accessible resource to affordable brand name home fashions? Yes it is!

Off price retailer T.J. Maxx discounts fashion-forward, top quality, brand name merchandise… the same designer and brand names that are found in catalogs and fine department and specialty stores. Their buyers travel around the world to build relationships, which result in a global network of more than 15,000 vendors in nearly thirty countries. This is in addition to the extensive work they do throughout the United States with domestic manufacturers and importers.

Start by refreshing any room with the newest trend in home decorating the serene beauty and ambiance of Asian influences. (Definitely my favorite style in home decorating.) Creating a soothing contemporary environment in your home can be simple and inexpensive by introducing Asian-inspired accent pieces which are the latest trend in home décor.

Everyone needs a "lift" in their décor as we finally come out of hibernation and welcome spring. The most sought after look for Spring 2000 is the clean, classic yet subtle flair of Asian accents. A few key pieces – such as a bamboo tray or a silver dragonfly planter, can transform a room and its visitors into a world of serenity." This is explained by Laura Cervone fashion spokesperson for T.J. Maxx.

How To Create A Serene Scene – Calming music, scented candles, filtered sunlight – these are a few of the environment enhancers, which help set the mood for the serene room. To create such a look in your room, look for:

Creating

Bamboo accents: They are everywhere this season. From trays to magazine racks, book ends, frames, lamps and more. Deep tones and lacquer finishes are predominant.

Quiet color: Look for sage throws, wheat-toned pillows and cornflower gold planters to bring the outdoors inside. The prevailing mood should be soft and tranquil.

Area rugs: An important element in traditional Asian home décor. See small, cotton weaves which feel as wonderful as they look.

The key is to be inventive and imaginative. For example, accent tables come alive when adorned with charming accent pieces, including picture frames, lamps and vases filled with fresh flowers. Framed mirrors are perhaps one of the most important tools in home design. Certainly, they serve to make small spaces appear larger, but they also draw attention and add glamour, as well as contrast, to empty walls. A beautiful gilded mirror in a casual sunroom adds brightness. A series of small-framed prints look especially attractive when surrounded by a decorative mirror. The newest trends in mirror frames: stately antique look alikes, carved gold leaf and whimsical window frames.

An affordable and beautiful way to add flair to empty wall space is to display decorative plates. Hanging wall units in gold or silver, coupled with colorful plates reflect your personal style. Plates are easy and inexpensive to update for the seasons and holidays.

"Shopping off-price allows you to increase your options as you decorate. It's the simple things that can make the biggest difference. Clustering your favorite collectibles, adding a colorful area rug or an attractive platter, or finding a distinctive mail bucket, these are the small touches that transform decorative into spectacular."

When building a new "area" in your home, remember that accessories provide a source of change that is both functional and feasible: framed photos, artwork umbrella stands, statuettes, baskets, clocks and bookends. These are some items that truly distinguish your own special design scheme and reinforce your personal style and personality. Don't be afraid to experiment and be creative, today's options are limitless and the values have never been better as you shape a special niche in your home that is definitely and uniquely your own" further elaborates T.J. Maxx's Laura Cervone.

Shoppers can truly extend their decorating dollars by shopping for accent pieces at off-price retailers like T.J. Maxx. With prices up to 60% less than department and specialty stores, shoppers to be able to experiment with new trends – without breaking the budget!

T.J. Maxx offers today's most exciting home fashions at terrific prices. For the nearest J.J. Maxx call 1-800-2TJ-MAXX.

Lyme Disease – Back In Full Force

The spring season is upon us and the daffodils and tulips aren't the only thing waking up from the severe cold winter that is behind us. The birds are chirping, the insects are starting to crawl around and most important, the Borrelia burgdorferei is here.

Lyme disease is caused by a microscopic organism called Borrelia burgdorferei, transmitted by the deer tick. The early stage of Lyme disease is often accompanied by flu-like, symptoms: fatigue, muscle aches, low grade fever, chills, headaches and often, at least in adults, by a red expanding rash which may look like a bull's eye. Later stage symptoms include arthritis, palsy, heart arrhythmia, joint and muscle pain, fatigue, memory loss and other neurological complications, which can be serious and chronic. Detection is difficult because the symptoms mimic those of common ailments and blood tests are not always reliable, especially in the early weeks of infection.

There are three stages in the life of the Lyme disease tick: larva, nymph and adult. The tiny larvae hatch from eggs in mid-summer but in order to transmit Lyme disease they must first feed on a host carrying Borrelia burgdorferei in its blood – most often the common field mouse is the culprit. When the next stage of the tick, the nymph, appears the following spring, as many as one third may be infected and are then able to transmit Lyme disease. That is why most cases of Lyme disease are transmitted in the spring and early summer. The final stage in the life of a tick, the adult, appears in the fall, but it is large enough to be more easily seen and avoided. It feeds on deer. Deer are responsible for the rapid spread of the tick population, but do not infect the ticks.

You have to protect yourself to reduce the risk of infection. There are several steps that can be taken to reduce that risk. Avoid areas that are likely to have ticks. Ticks prefer a dense and sheltered microclimate, as do the animals they typically feed on. Most of their lives are spent in underbrush, on the underside of leaves, in wood lots, leaf litter or in the nests of rodents. Avoid these areas.

The ticks are small and very hard to see, so small that most people who contract Lyme disease cannot remember having been bitten. You should wear light colored clothing to help spot the ticks. Tuck your trousers into your socks or boots to prevent ticks from crawling unnoticed up your legs. Remove the ticks before twenty-hours have passed and the chances of transmission are reduced.

Another way to reduce the tick population is to treat your yard to kill ticks. Use pesticides that will both reach and kill the ticks, and kill as few other living organisms as possible. Convential sprays have difficulty reaching infected ticks because sprays work the best in open anreas and on the upper surfaces of leaves. Unfortunately, the ticks that are found in areas like lawns, where sprays can easily reach, are usually not infected with Lyme disease, because the primary source of infection, the field mouse, is rarely found in an open area. Mice are always hiding, fearful of being seen and caught by predators. If the mouse is not out in the open, infected ticks will not likely be either, because they are incapable of moving more that a few inches from where they feed. On the other hand, if ticks move by being transported by an animal, and because ticks feed only once in each stage of their life, they will not then be a threat to people.

Another difficulty in reaching ticks with conventional sprays arises from the fact that ticks need moist and sheltered areas and are not usually found on the upper surfaces of the leaves.

Infected ticks are mostly to be found in mouse habitats and on the undersides of leaves where sprays cannot easily reach them.

An effective way to kill ticks is to use the product Damminix Tick Tubes, developed at Harvard University which are much more precisely targeted than sprays and can reach and kill Lyme disease carrying ticks. This simple method is very effective in reducing the risk of exposure to infected ticks. One village, Fire Island Pines, has used Damminix for years and its effectiveness has been tested in comparison with the untreated land immediately adjacent in the Fire Island National Seashore.

Damminix Tick Tubes are available from many local lawn and garden suppliers, hardware stores and professional pesticide applicators.

POLICE BLOTTER

A Springs resident called police to say that someone had driven across her front lawn and into her front porch on Springs-Fireplace Road. The driver was trying to restart the 1987 Toyota pickup, without success, so the three occupants left. The complainant watched them leave and pointed police in their general direction. Police found Virgilio Bonilla, twenty-five, of Muir Boulevard in East Hampton, who admitted to driving the truck and who police said had a hard time standing, with his two passengers. Bonilla was charged with DWI, leaving the scene of an accident and first degree aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle. He was held on $6,000 bail.

A Dodge pickup was found hanging on a tree on Three Mile Harbor Road in East Hampton. Unconscious on the front seat was Robert D. Hagney, fifty-one, of Cedar Drive in East Hampton. Hagney was treated at Southampton Hospital for facial and head injuries. According to police his speech was slurred and his breath smelled of alcohol. He was arrested for DWI, and later released without bail.

Marsha S. Monteith, twenty-six, of Columbia, SC, was driving on Cedar Street in East Hampton, when her 1997 Saturn ran off the road and became inverted, landing on its roof. Police later found Monteith wandering down the road with great difficulty. She appeared intoxicated according to police, and had a hard time standing. She was charged with DWI.

Paul A. Petrou, 38, of Bearsville NY, was stopped for driving his 1999 Land Rover at ninety-one mph on the Napeague stretch. According to police, he exhibited signs of intoxication and was charged accordingly. Bail was set at $5,000, and was paid.

An Amagansett woman complained that somebody stole her Sony Playstation, ten CDs and a tiger-print body suit. The suit snatchers entered the Cliff Road home through an unlocked window.

An unknown intruder really wanted to get into a Woodruff Lane house in Bridgehampton. They tried very hard to kick the door in, however, they door opens out. There was quite a bit of damage.

At the East Hampton Day Care Center, somebody broke into a parked school bus. They did not take anything, but they left behind food wrappers, paper cups and some vomit.

A Water Mill resident's Upper Seven Ponds Road home was assaulted in a drive-by. In a clear case of alcohol abuse, the assailant threw a full, forty ounce bottle of Budweiser through the front window.

A North Sea resident complained that they had an unwanted guest who allegedly would not leave. Police arrested Cathy Darlene Wilson, forty-three, of Southampton, and charged her with second degree harassment. As police took Wilson away, she allegedly said to the complainant, "I'm going to [bad word] kill you."

Dan's LETTERS

SWEPT UNDER THE RUG?

Dear Dan,

I am upset about an issue that seems to be being swept under the rug in our town. On March 29, 2000 a live broadcast of HellTV was shown for two hours over channel 70 and (27). Producers Andrew Hellman and Adam Verrano along with several of their buddies held an unsupervised live call-in show discussing teen life in East Hampton. The show became a mockery of everything that a town like East Hampton considers to be decent behavior. The boys insulted and verbally defiled several girls in their peer group.

The idea that boys will be boys, and the statement that Frazier Dougherty (President of LTV) said to me over the phone this morning, when I called to request a copy of the tape again, "everybody is embarrassed and has apologized, and it seems to be dying down," does not take into account the lasting effect that these events will have on the girls involved. Lack of sleep, constant tears, embarrassment because they feel that they will always be thought of in this light by some people, mistrust by their families, extra whispering in the hall, perpetuate the nasty aspect of what this attack on their character has done to the girls. Have we learned nothing in the age of women's equality? I am 1`00% for freedom of speech, but not for libelous trashing of innocent people, male or female.

The tape has disappeared, allegedly destroyed by the father of one of the producers, an unpracticing lawyer. No one has seen the destroyed tapes. A copy with the relevant part edited out was delivered to my post office box. I have been told that a complete copy is in the hands of one of the producers. Perhaps the lawyers involved are afraid what might happen to their darling sons if the evidence were not destroyed? If the tables turned and the parents of the girls were lawyers, thing might be different.

This is a letter to inform the community at large about what values we are instilling in our children. The two producers were suspended from school for five days. The Hellman family has allegedly agreed to keep their son from attending school for the remainder of the year, and wants home tutoring for him to be paid for by you and me. No one has suggested this as a solution for the embarrassed girls. I have been to the School Board who were concerned to show that they had no liability. I have been to the Town Board brown bag meeting, in which the town attorney cited Guiliani and the Brooklyn Musuem – in my opinion, completely irrelevant, although in all due respect I have not heard their final discussion of this mater. I'm afraid that this is being downplayed because of the current cable negotiations and funding issues, which are ongoing.

I am pursuing this issue because I do not want to see it happen again to anyone. This could be your daughter I am writing about. Keep that in mind.

MORE THAN A LITTLE LITTER

Dear Dan,

(An open letter to Vince Cannuscio, Supervisor, Southampton Town):

It's getting worse, the amount of garbage that is. It a disgrace that the public must have to look at this mess, especially out-of-towners visiting here for the first time.

The way bags of garbage and pieces of trash are just left to accumulate along the roads in Riverside and Flankers reminders me of Central America, especially Guatemala and Honduras. Down there it is acceptable. There are no littering laws and most of the people who live there don't care, I have been there.

We are in North America where most people take pride in their community, except for the few slobs who litter.

There must be some Southampton legislation that can get our area cleaned up. I bet there are no piles of garbage in Hampton Bays or Southampton.

Perhaps you and some council members could take a walk around here; I'll even go with you. I bet you would be disgusted.

I have enclosed a few photos of what we must look at everyday, please help us.

CONCERN FOR WILDLIFE

Dear Dan,

On Saturday evening, my spouse and I were on our way to Sag Harbor when we saw someone hit a pheasant. They injured the bird and continued driving. Can you imagine a "Hit and run" in the Hamptons? It is interesting to note that other people did stop to see if the bird was okay.

I own a travel company in the city and send many, many people to the Hamptons. They stay at the best hotels and inns. Just as we are concerned about the future of our environment, there should also be concerne about wildlife.

WRONG MOUNTAINS

Dear Dan,

I always enjoy your articles for their style, humor, off beat subject matter, and, up to now, accuracy. The article on Hamptons Water, March 31, which clarified the problems concerning our water supply, failed on the last of the above-viz... NYC receives its water largely by aqueduct from the Adirondacks. Where oh where are the Catskills whose reservoirs have supplied the Big Apple for these many decades?

NOT LOST IN THE TRANSLATION

Dear Dan,

I could not help but chuckle when recently I heard a pseudo Indian translation of Chappaqua meaning, "Home of separate bedrooms." It has long been known that Gracie is an acronym for, "Mansion with separate bedrooms."

We may well be in for a contest between the two most rested senatorial candidates in New York State history. All that pent up energy...

Scary thought.
